THE LADY OF SHALOTT.

By ALPRED TANKERON.

On either side the river lie Long fields of barteys, dof rye, That clothe the wold and meet the sky, And through the field the road runs by To many-towered Camelet;

And up and own the people go, Gazing where the lilies blow Reund an island there below— The Island of Shalott.

Willows whiten; aspens quiver;
Little breezes dusk and shiver
Through the wave that runs for ever
By the island in the river,
Flowing down to Camelot.
Four gray walls, and four gray towers,
Overlook a space of fixers;
And the silent isle imbowers
The lady of Shalott.

By the margin, willow-veiled, Silds the heavy barges, trailed By slow horses; and, unhalled, The shallop fitteth, silken-sailed Skimming down to Camelot. But who hath seen her wave her hand? Or at the casement seen her stand?

Or at the casement seen her star Or is she known in all the land— The lady of Shalott?

Only reapers, resping early in among the hearded barley, Rear a song that sealose cheerly From the river, winding clearly Down to towered Caunel

And by the moon the resper weary, Pring sheaves in spland siry, Listening, whispers, "Tis the fairy Laity of Shalou."

PART II.

There she weaves by night and day
A magic web with colors gay.
She has heard a whisper say
A curse is on her if she stay
To look down to Camelot.
She knews not what the curse may be;
And so she weaveth steadily,
And little other care hath she—
The lady of Shalott.

But in her web she still delights
To weave the mirror's magic sights;
For otten, through the silent nights,
A funeral, with plumes and lights
And music, went to Cameloi
Or, when the moon was overhead,
Came two young levers lately wed;
"I am half-sick of shadows," said
The lady of Shalott.

All in the blue unclouded weather. Thick-jewelled shone the saddle-leather. The heimet and the halmet-leather Burned like one burning flame together, As he rode down to Camelot. As often through the purple night, Below the starry clusters bright, Some bearded meteor, trailing light, Moves over still Shalets. Attended to with neatness and dispatch. May 22, IS73 50 1y His broad clear brow in sunlight glowed; His broad clear brow in suntign grow-On burnished hooves his war-horse tr From underneath his helmet flowed His coal-black wages as on he rods, as he rode down to Camelot. From the bank and from the river He flashed into the crystal mirror: "Tirra lirra," by the river, Sang Mer Lancelot. REPAIRING, &C. REPAIRS!

She left the web, she left the loom;
She made three paces through the room;
She saw the water-life bloom;
She saw the helmet and the plume;
She looked down to Camelot;
Out flew the web, and floated wide;
The mirror cracked from side to side;
"The curse is come upon me," cried
The lady of abalott.

PART IV. In the stormy east-wind straining.
The pale y-liew woods w-re waning—
The broad stream in his banks complat
Heavily the low sky raining
Over tewered Casselot;
Down she came, and found a boat,
Beneath a willow left afloat;
And round about the pros and wrote
The lady of Shelott.

And down the river's dim expanse— Like some bold seer in a trance, Seeing all his own mischance— Seeing all his own miscusses.

With a glassy countenance
Did she jook to Camelot,
And at the closing of the day
She loosed the chain and down she lay
The broad stream here her far away—
The lady of Shalott.

Lying robed in anowy white,
That loosely flew to left and right—
The leaves upon her failing light—
Through the noises of the night—
She floated down to Carnelot;
And as the toat head w und along,
The willowy hills and fields among,
They heard herainging her last song—
The lady of Shaiott—

Heard a carol, mournful, holy, Chapted loudly, chanted lowly—Till her blood was frozen slowly, And her eyes were darkened wholly, Turned to towered Camelot For ere she reached, upen the tide, The first house by the water-side, Singing, in her song she died—The lady of Shalott.

Under tower and balcony,
By garsen wall and gallery,
A cleaming shape, she floated by—
A corse between the houses high—
Silent into Camelot
Out upon the wharfs they came,
Knight and burgher, lord and dame;
And round the prow they read her naw
The lady of Sastott.

Who is this ? and what is here ! Who is this I and what is here
And in the royal palace near
Died the sound of royal cheer;
And they crossed themselves for fear—
All the knights at Camelot;
But Lance for mused a little pace;
He said, "She has a lovely face;
God in his mercy lend her grace—
The lady of Shalest."
